

How to Become a Successful Cocktail Bartender in Sydney

Being a bartender means carrying a lot of responsibility on your shoulder because you're the face of the bar. Whether it is the customers or the bar staff, everyone looks up to a good bartender for answers to their problems. If you want to become one of the many successful cocktail bartenders in Sydney, this article will show you how to become just that, and more.

Be a Clean Freak

A dirty bar speaks volumes about the unprofessionalism of the bartender. Any leftovers, garbage, spills, and napkins left on the counter or floor depicts a non-serious attitude, in addition to bad hygiene. If you want to be a successful bartender in Sydney, don't clean your station every half hour or so, clean it more frequently; be a clean freak.

Don't be Moody

Regardless of whether your day is going great, didn't get enough sleep or whether you are experiencing a bad patch in your personal life, you have to maintain a pleasant attitude at the bar. Anyone can show their mood, but only successful bartenders in Sydney hide the bad and show the good, all for their customers.

Offer Expert Advice

Customers value the suggestions bartenders offer them because they are the experts in their field. Once you see a customer indecisive of what to try at the bar, you should make a few suggestions. Similarly, you can also encourage your regulars to try out new a new drink at the bar before they order.

You Can't Afford to Procrastinate

Being a bartender comes with the added responsibility of being prompt and swift with your service. Whether it is restocking the bar, a customer who needs attention, encouragement or advice, or a spill that needs to be cleaned, you need to do it all fast. Any bartender can leave a task for later but only successful ones in Sydney ensure they complete it immediately.

You Need an Ever Watchful Eye

Bartenders have a lot on their plate because they look after the whole floor. As such, if you see someone being rowdy, make sure you deal with them immediately. If you see a customer waiting, serve them as soon as possible. If you see a customer who has had enough to drink, do the right thing and send them home. This will show your professionalism for the job and care for your customers, reflecting a successful attitude.

You can be the average Sydney bartender and just serve drinks, clean every now and again, and leave certain jobs for later. It may get the bills paid, but it's likely to get you fired. If you want to be a successful bartender, you need to always go above and beyond people's expectations. That is how successful cocktail bartenders in Sydney work.
